STOCKTON DEVELOPMENT CODE & DESIGN STANDARDS UPDATE OPEN HOUSE

Community opportunity to share ideas and priorities to help Shape Stockton

STOCKTON, Calif. – The City of Stockton Community Development Department will host an interactive open house for community members to learn more about the City’s project to update its zoning code and design standards that are used for entitlement, business license, code enforcement, and building permit reviews. Join us for a community workshop to discuss design standards for homes and businesses: Saturday, September 24, 2022, 10:00 a.m. to 12:00 p.m., Stribley Community Center, 1760 E. Sonora St.

“City planning efforts involve making certain that the development and design standards that shape our community work for everyone,” said Deputy Director of Community Development Mike McDowell. “Design standards go beyond zoning to provide specific requirements for things such as building orientation, architecture, and onsite amenities. Community ideas, preferences and priorities are all essential to shaping our future, and we look forward to this open house and other workshops to help with the process.”
